Extension Office and Solid Waste Department Announce Monofilament Fishing Line Recycling Program

The University of Florida/St. Lucie County Cooperative Extension office, in conjunction with the County's Recycling Department, is implementing a new recycling program that focuses on removing used monofilament fishing line from the environment. Discarded fishing line accounts for many tragic wildlife deaths due to entanglement. One solution to the problem is to have recycling containers available to boaters and fishermen to discard their used line. St. Lucie County placed recycling containers at the Black Pearl Boat Ramp, the Stan Blum Memorial Boat Ramp and other locations throughout the county. These recycling receptacles will be monitored on a regular basis by county staff and volunteers and the cleaned line will be shipped in 40-pound increments to a monofilament line processor for recycling. For more information, contact Ken Gioeli or Leroy Creswell at the St. Lucie County Cooperative Extension office at (772) 462-1660 or Jacquie Burgess at the County Landfill at (772) 462-5678.
